Brandon: Job & Career Green Flag / Red Flag

What to actually look for. Brandon reacts to each one: green flag or red flag. Open on the first item.

A Job Offer

- Pay is way above market for the role
- They rushed you and want an answer tomorrow
- They can clearly explain how you'll be measured
- The role was "created just for you"
- Everyone you'd work with seems checked out
- The person who'd manage you is genuinely impressive

The Interview

- They can't tell you why the last person left
- The owner interviews you personally
- They ghost you two weeks, then rush
- They ask about results, not years of experience
- Three rounds for an entry-level job
- They keep selling "we're like a family"

Your Boss

- Takes credit for your work
- Still does the hardest jobs themselves
- Only gives feedback at review time
- Protects their people from the higher-ups
- Changes direction every week
- Hires people smarter than themselves

A Company Worth Working For

- Growing and hiring
- Constant reorgs and layoffs
- The owner reinvests instead of flashing money
- High turnover on your future team
- Quietly profitable for years, no hype
- Everyone's title is inflated

A Startup Job Offer

- Big equity, below-market salary
- They can't explain how they make money
- The founder has built something before
- "Pre-revenue but about to blow up"
- You'd be employee number five
- Less than a year of runway

Your Career Path

- Same title for four years
- You're the least experienced person in the room
- Your skills would transfer anywhere
- Your entire income depends on one company
- You're bored but comfortable
- You're learning faster than you're earning

A Remote Job

- Fully remote, US, at top dollar
- Clear outcomes, not hours watched
- "We'll figure out your role as we go"
- The whole team has never met in person
- They measure what you produce
- Nonstop "quick calls" all day

Your Industry

- AI can already do the entry-level version
- People will always need it done in person
- It's consolidating into a few big players
- High demand, not enough skilled people
- It's "hot" and everyone's rushing in
- Nobody young wants to do it anymore